Private University Retains Flynt Group

Kansas City, MO – May 21, 2007 – The Flynt Group, Inc., announced today that a major, private university has retained it to provide risk management consultation and advanced tactical training in establishing an armed security response capability.

Flynt Group's CEO, Dr. Bill Flynt, said "The tragedy of the Virginia Tech shooting has led several corporations and universities to examine their existing policies and security response protocols. We have been retained by a major, private university to assist them in establishing a discrete, armed response option. Our support includes advising their leadership in establishing policies and procedures to manage the risk of an armed threat and training their officers in close quarters tactics against an active shooter."
