Flynt Group CEO and FBI Special Agent Discuss Agroterrorism on National Radio Talk Show

Kansas City, MO – May 31, 2007 – The Flynt Group, Inc., announced that its CEO, Dr. Bill Flynt, participated in the national radio talk show program AgriTalk with FBI Special Agent Peter DeLaCuesta concerning the threat of agroterrorism to America's agriculture and food production infrastructures.

“Agroterrorism's threat to our Nation's food supply is an important national security issue. The potential consequences of an attack on our agriculture infrastructure or food supply chains could entail catastrophic economic loss, long-term damage to affected sectors, and, more importantly, significant illness and even death in some scenarios. The FBI and its InfraGard program are doing a great deal to bring vital private-sector knowledge and expertise together with our national homeland security initiatives to better protect America.”
