Flynt Group CEO Addressing the Midwest Energy Association on Terrorism Targeting Critical Infrastructures

Kansas City, MO – January 12, 2004 – The Flynt Group, Inc., announced today that its President and CEO, Bill Flynt, will address the Midwest Energy Association's Annual Spring Business Roundtable on terrorism targeting critical infrastructures, being held March 14-16, 2004, at the SunBurst Resort in Scottsdale, Arizona.

The Midwest Energy Association (MEA: www.midwestenergy.org) is one of the nation's leading energy organizations in the nation's gas and electric critical infrastructures. Corporate members participate in the interstate or intrastate energy production, transmission, or distribution sectors of the natural, manufactured, gas or liquefied petroleum, mixed gases, or electricity industries.

Flynt's remarks will share with MEA's corporate executives the challenges facing them in critical infrastructure security, emerging Best Practices and compliance requirements, as well as the new threats and anticipated costs facing their firms.

Commenting on the summit, Flynt said, "Critical infrastructure risk management is a strategic concern of the members of the Midwest Energy Association and other corporations. They own, operate, and maintain the core infrastructure – energy – on which all other infrastructures in our country depend. The Flynt Group has worked with several of their corporate members, and it's a valuable opportunity to continue assisting this important organization in the protection of these complex systems that are vital to the Midwest's and nation's communities and economy."
